

Paris Comes to Denver

By Patty Beyers

With a quaint antique boutique crafted out of beautiful wrought iron railing salvaged from a turn of the century Denver clubhouse giving the illusion of a balcony – perhaps overlooking the Champs-Elysees – A Paris Apartment isn't exactly what you'd expect to find at a flea market. But that's the only place you'll find it.

The store is a fixture at Mile High Marketplace's D Row in Antique Alley. Located in Denver, Colorado, A Paris Apartment is set up for buyers to leisurely stroll through several vignettes depicting various rooms inside Paris apartments. The rooms are decorated with items from everyday living like knitting needles and yarn left on a craft table, swatches of upholstery fabric, a musical score casually left on a stand, or even an album of old family photographs.

In addition to eclectic and vintage home décor, a line of luscious French soaps, vintage jewelry designed by local talent, a clever greeting card line and custom pillows by local artisans will be on display.

A Clawfoot bathtub, vintage washbasin, crystal Czech sconce hanging on a damask wall papered divider, deco armoire, 9 ft farmhouse doors, and mid-century mod treasures are a sample of what you may find.

Stacey Johnson, creator of the highly successful A Paris Street Market in Littleton is the creative inspiration behind A Paris Apartment.
